Here's a short paper by the late David Crowe on isolation and purification. Chain of logic ... the virus was never purified, and therefore probably does not exist. If it does not exist, then no test can determine if anyone has it. There can be no antibody test.

Now that we have it firmly in mind that they are testing for CTCCTTTGTTGTGTTGT, and that this is a sequence in all of us, I think it safe to say that the virus was not discovered in Wuhan, that that part was just a staged rollout. It has never been isolated because it cannot be isolated, and that the crux of the pandemic, surely planned and worked out in advance was to select for the "virus" the DNA sequence that we all had but would only turn up infrequently under the PCR microscope.

Before I thought they were just using the machine to generate random results. But they were much, much craftier, and now, last count, 93,200 people have been exposed to this information. WHO and CDC might now consider these 93,200 people infected.
